considered. In the end, our goal is to publish the best science, and as articulated by our Academy, “manufacturers of medical devices, biologics, drugs and other items use(d) in the care of the patient...play an important role in...(t)his collaborative effort.”

James H. Lubowitz, M.D.
Editor-in-Chief
Jefferson C. Brand, M.D.
Assistant Editor-in-Chief
Michael J. Rossi, M.D., M.S.
Assistant Editor-in-Chief

References

Brian R. Waterman, M.D., Associate Editor

We welcome Brian R. Waterman, M.D., to our editorial team as Associate Editor. Dr. Waterman earned his Bachelor of Arts degree at the University of Virginia and his Doctor of Medicine at Eastern Virginia Medical School. During his service as a Major in the United States Army, he completed his internship and residency in the combined orthopaedic surgery program at William Beaumont Army Medical Center and Texas Tech University Health Sciences Center, going on to serve as Administrative Chief Resident. He did his Orthopaedic Sports Medicine and Shoulder Surgery Fellowship at Rush University Medical Center in Chicago. He is currently Associate Professor of Orthopaedic Surgery at Wake Forest University School of Medicine, where he also serves as a team physician for Wake Forest University athletics, the Chicago White Sox affiliate Winston-Salem Dash, and Forsyth County Schools.

Dr. Waterman is a member of numerous societies, including AANA, AOSSM, AAOS, SOMOS, and ASES. He is a prolific author and presenter and is a peer reviewer for numerous journals. He became a reviewer for Arthroscopy in 2011 and was named the highest rated reviewer that year. He was invited to join the Editorial Board in 2014.

When not at work or in the training room, Dr. Waterman can typically be found traveling and spending time with his wife, Sarah McCoy, who is a New York Times bestselling novelist. They are proud to call Winston-Salem and Wake Forest University home.

James H. Lubowitz, M.D.
Editor-in-Chief