

Announcements

The Arthroscopy Association of North America's 2017 Resident/Fellows Courses featuring hands-on cadaver labs will be held at the OLC Education & Conference Center in Rosemont, Illinois: January 12-14, 2017; January 19-21, 2017; and December 7-9, 2017. Visit www.aana.org for more information.

The Arthroscopy Association of North America's 2017 AANA Professional Excellence Series (APEX) courses featuring exclusive one-on-one cadaveric instruction will be held at the OLC Education & Conference Center in Rosemont, Illinois, on various dates throughout 2017. Visit www.aana.org/APEX for more information.

The Metcalf/Arthroscopy Association of North America 2017 Winter Meeting – Arthroscopic Surgery Seminar will be held February 23-26, 2017, at the Snowbird Cliff Lodge in Snowbird, Utah. For more information, visit www.aana.org.

The Arthroscopy Association of North America 2017 Specialty Day will be held March 18, 2017, in conjunction with the American Academy of Orthopaedic Surgeons Annual Meeting at the San Diego Convention Center in San Diego, California. For more information, visit www.aana.org.

The Editors of Arthroscopy: The Journal of Arthroscopic and Related Surgery are pleased to announce the opening of the 2017 Best Article Competition. Authors can compete in 5 categories, each for a $1,000 prize: Best Resident or Fellow Article, Best Basic Science Article, Best Clinical Science Article, Most Downloaded Article (5-year window, 2011-2016), and Most Cited Article. Articles submitted between September 1, 2016, and August 31, 2017, are eligible to win. Other than for the Most Downloaded/Most Cited prizes, winners will be selected by vote of the journal's Editors. All Original Articles, Meta-analyses, and Systematic Reviews are eligible. We invite authors to designate in their cover letter that they wish to be considered, but all accepted articles will be equally considered for the competition regardless of author application. Prize winners will be announced in December 2017. Please contact the Editorial Office with any questions. Best of luck!